Well-being	Good
-------------------	-------------

Children are happy, settled and have a strong sense of belonging at Coastlands CP School Club. Children have formed strong, close relationships with their peers and staff. They are confident and engaging communicators. They enthusiastically engage with their friends and frequently approach staff to share ideas. For example, they happily approached us (CIW) to ask questions and chat. They are familiar with routines as well as the ethos of the setting. One child told us, "I love it here. My favourite food is wraps. I enjoy painting and playing tractors."

Children's voice is strong. Throughout the visit, we heard children's voices being actively acknowledged and respected, for example when asking for additional sheets of paper whilst painting. Children choose how they spend their time at the setting. Some children choose to play with a collection of small vehicles on the yard, whilst others move from area to area exploring the resources made available to them. During snack time, children confidently state what they'd like to eat and get to choose which colour bowl they'd like. We heard children state "I want a crumpet with jam please."

Interactions between children and adults are consistently positive and nurturing, and children cooperate enthusiastically. Children express empathy and care towards each other and listen carefully to one another. For example, we saw children show genuine care towards one another during snack time by ensuring their friend had a place to sit at the table. We heard a child say, "Come and sit by me." Children cooperate, take turns and share. An example of this is when we observed a small group of children creating a ramp and tunnel for the play cars to travel through.

Children immerse themselves in their play, using language and developing their skills across all areas of development through purposeful resources made available to them. We saw two children mixing different coloured paints. The child proudly told the staff member, "It's green and orange and I've made brown. Look."

Children experience interesting, developmentally appropriate opportunities that promote their all-round development. During our visit, children chose the activities they wanted to do from the resources available. Nearly all children are busy and active in their play. We saw a child using their imagination to set up a role play of 'my house' from the wooden structure outdoors.

Children have good opportunities to develop their independence skills throughout the session, enabling them to do things for themselves successfully. We saw children pour water and milk from jugs into their cups, use the toilet independently as well as work together as pairs to return boxes of resources following tidy up time. Children were also confident accessing resources and moving freely around the indoor and outdoor environments.

Staff have a comprehensive understanding of the setting's policies which they consistently implement to promote healthy lifestyles, personal safety of children and ensure children's well-being is a priority. They effectively manage any risks as they arise, for example reminding children to be careful as they go under the picnic tables to make dens after school as well as the use of 'walking feet' indoors. Staff speak respectfully with children, show interest, pleasure and care in all that they do. Staff managed children's behaviour well during the visit. Staff are kind and caring and celebrate children's achievement verbally as well as visually with stickers.

Staff are motivated and enthusiastic and offer children consistent support in their play, learning and development. Staff support children as they freely explore their environment. They are very attentive to children's own chosen play and the setting, as a whole, is very child-led. In the moment planning is used successfully to follow children's interests, for example a child wanted to mix paint colours to create new colours, whilst an older child confidently stated they wanted to write a poem after school.

Staff have a thorough understanding of their responsibilities to protect children. They confidently answer child protection scenarios and have sound knowledge of safeguarding procedures. Staff supervise children effectively. For example, they position themselves well, whilst supervising children during outside play. They are aware of children's allergies and their individual needs. Accident and incident records are recorded via the school app and shared with parents verbally. The person in charge told us parents are required to acknowledge notifications of accidents via the school app. Staff follow sufficient hygiene practices. They ensure regular hand washing and wiping of surfaces; however, we did not observe the use of aprons and gloves when handling food.

Staff are committed to providing a range of play and learning activities. We saw staff supporting and extending children's vocabulary and understanding in their play and learning, for example, during snack time, staff asked questions in relation to the jug being full and empty. Staff do not plan formal activities. However, they ensure activities offered are in line with the theme followed at the school. Overall, they are committed to providing a good range of play and learning activities and opportunities.

Environment

Good

People who run the setting have comprehensive measures and procedures in place to ensure the setting is safe for children. The setting is clean, tidy, well maintained and very welcoming. The premises both inside and outside are secure and people who run the setting ensure they keep a record of visitors. Effective risk assessments and safety checks are in place. They ensure staff and child ratios meet the National Minimum Standards. Overall, fire drills are practised by children attending the provision as they are present throughout the entire day. However, recent fire drill records did not evidence fire drills practised during the afternoon and did not include the number of staff and children present. Following the inspection visit, the leader confirmed new records have been created to include the numbers present.

People who run the setting ensure spacious facilities for the provision. There are designated indoor and outdoor play spaces for children to move freely, within the respective areas. They ensure the environment meets the children's needs well. The outdoor play space is used as an integral part of the provision. The secure outside allows for a range of resources and play equipment, with direct access from their room. They have use of a large playground, field, and adventure activity area.

The indoor areas are clean, open, airy and well-lit, offering many different areas for play. Resources and toys are of good quality and clean. Staff do not currently keep a written record of when toys and resources are deep cleaned. Areas are well arranged and presented with care, offering purposeful opportunities for good learning experiences, encouraging curious learners to explore with, for example a collection of natural materials such as shells and pinecones in the mud kitchen. Children have considerable freedom to safely explore their indoor and outdoor environment. Children are able to enjoy a free flow environment and choose for themselves if they want to play inside or outside. Children also choose from several learning areas to explore such as mark making area, role play, sensory play as well as physical play.

People who run the setting provide good quality furniture and resources that are suitable for the developmental needs of all children. The setting uses a variety of natural and real-life resources, for example children had access to metal pots and pans and stirring equipment. Staff told us multi-cultural resources are available and they do celebrate Chinese New Year, Ramadan, and Diwali. Overall, equality and cultural awareness are promoted well.

Leadership and Management

Good

The Responsible Individual and designated people in charge are committed to ongoing improvements and work efficiently as a team. They review policies and procedures and ensure these are put into practice. All the required records are accurately kept and maintained. Staff signing in and out records were implemented during the inspection, to ensure clear records of who is always working with children. People who run the setting engage well with CIW and act promptly on recommendations.

There is a culture of continuous professional development. Staff state they feel supported by management and have plenty of opportunities to develop. An effective and meaningful self-evaluation process is implemented. The setting's quality of care report reflects the service with staff and children's views being listened to.

The people running the setting support staff well. They carry out regular supervision and appraisal meetings and plan for staff development. All staff we spoke to said they are very happy working at the setting and feel well supported by leaders. During the visit, not all suitability documentation was available for viewing. We were sent evidence of all suitability checks following the visit and leaders confirmed all documentation is now stored within staff files and kept securely and confidentially.

The people running the setting have good partnerships with parents and share information via an app. They also keep parents informed verbally. The parents we spoke to are happy with the setting. Feedback included, "They are a life saver as a working parent. My children love it and are sad when there is no club. They get a healthy snack here and we received a pack with the policies and procedures. Really happy with everything. They're really flexible." One parent felt they would benefit from more information in relation to what their child had eaten as well as a general overview of their afternoon at the setting.

The people who run the setting have strong links with the school they are based within. The people who run the setting and staff make a conscious effort to promote the Welsh language through incidental use of the language and bilingual signage.
