Summary

Children communicate confidently as their wishes are considered. They feel happy and are given good opportunities for their age and stage of development. Children enjoy the independence to do things for themselves confidently.

Staff understand the setting's policies and implement them consistently. They promote healthy lifestyles and the children's well-being. Staff manage risks and understand their responsibilities to safeguard children. They are good role models, and they build the confidence and self-esteem of the children in their care.

People who run the setting implement clear and effective measures to ensure children's safety. They are aware of their responsibilities and maintain clear risk assessments and building safety equipment. People who run the setting provide a good facility and quality resources and ensure children can access these throughout their time in the setting.

People who run the setting provide clear policies, in line with regulations and the National Minimum Standards. They ensure staff are well supported and are given appropriate training for their roles. They have strong partnerships with the school, health professionals and parents who are all supportive of the setting.

Children are happy and have a good voice at this setting. They make purposeful choices and move around the setting confidently. For example, they can choose where to play such as the role-play resources in the home corner or exploring arts and crafts. Children enjoy making decisions as they take part in activities such as creating a tea party in the home corner for Spiderman and Rainbow Girl. Some children express themselves clearly using words and phrases. For example, at snack time, children choose their preferred drinks and foods. They speak confidently and feel they are listened to by staff. Children who do not wish to take part in a planned activity say so clearly, and happily select different play resources.

Children are settled and cope well as they separate from their parents and carers. We saw settling in processes being implemented effectively, with children receiving gentle comfort and reassurance from staff in terms of who was coming to collect them and when that would be. Children form close bonds with staff, which has a positive impact on their well-being and motivation. Children feel a sense of belonging and smile as they receive praise from staff for showing kindness to a friend or being an excellent helper at tidy up time. For example, “Well done,” “excellent,” “super good” and “da iawn”. Children are clearly familiar with their routines and enjoy knowing what is coming next. For example, children knew it was ‘hand washing time’ when the hand washing song is played on the large TV in the main playroom.

Children enjoy their opportunities to play and learn. They show a keen interest and engage well in the experiences available to them. Nearly all children show curiosity and explore a variety of play opportunities. For example, they show excitement as they build a large tower with construction blocks saying, “look at me, look at me” with staff responding, “Waw look how big that tower is you have all built, it’s as big as me!” with children laughing in response. Children listen well, such as when they respond to staff instructions with many children feeling a sense of achievement when they succeed in activities. For example, when they successfully help tidy away the construction blocks and are praised by staff for their efforts and teamwork in putting the large pieces away together.

Children develop their independence skills effectively and nearly all children complete self-care tasks confidently. For example, during toileting, children are independent with handwashing. They enjoy the process of using the soap dispenser and being able to turn off the tap and helping themselves to paper towels, placing these in waste bins. Children enjoy the independence of using the tissue station and wipe their noses with confidence and use the drinks station where they identify their own individually labelled beakers. Children show pride and in hanging up their own coats and bags on the individually labelled pegs.

Care and Development

Good

Staff are experienced, knowledgeable and understand the setting's policies and procedures, implementing these consistently. They promote healthy lifestyles, physical activities, and children's personal well-being. Staff manage risks effectively and keep children safe. They prioritise safeguarding and have a clear understanding of their responsibilities to protect children. Staff know how to raise concerns and confidently explain the setting's procedures. Staff practice good hygiene practices. They are at hand to offer praise and support when children use the toilet and talked us through the procedures taken when nappy changing. Toileting is carried out respecting dignity and privacy. They wear appropriate aprons and hats during snack preparation and ensure that foods served are varied, healthy and nutritious. They know the children very well and are aware of their individual needs. Staff allow time for children to make choices about what they wish to eat. They are familiar with their responsibilities to safeguard children with allergies and intolerances, and we saw clear posters on the notice board in the playroom which support safe practices. Staff are knowledgeable regarding their responsibilities to support children with additional learning needs and ensure care plans are in place. They follow clear procedures regarding medication, accidents, and incidents correctly.

Staff communicate well with children and create a calm and relaxed atmosphere. They are good role models and interact warmly and purposefully throughout the session. For example, they sit with children during lunch and snack time, modelling good social and communication skills, leading to meaningful discussions. During snack we heard staff saying, "Would you like some more of your cucumber sandwiches? Good boy. Da iawn." "That is amazing, well-done children." Staff respond to children's requests and questions and interact with them in a kind and consistent manner. They are caring and sensitive to the needs and experiences of children, sharing a positive approach to managing children's behaviour. Staff move around the environment continuously and are always close by to support children and offer reassurance. Their interactions with each other and with the children demonstrate respect and children are happy and content. We heard staff thanking each other when items and tasks are shared. Staff praise children for being kind or sharing resources and this has a beneficial impact on children's behaviour and self-esteem.

Staff are knowledgeable, and have a good understanding of children's needs, interests and how this affects their learning experiences. They work well together to build the children's confidence and resilience and provide interesting opportunities, which are led by the child's choices and decisions. Staff use some incidental Welsh at the setting such as words of praise and greetings. They provide children with varied and valuable opportunities to learn about the world around them through celebrating different cultures and festivals through craft activities and stories such as St Valentine's Day and Dydd Gwyl Dewi.

Environment

Good

People who run the setting provide effective measures and policies in place to ensure that everyone is aware of their responsibilities regarding the children's safety. They ensure that the environment is secure and well maintained, both indoors and outdoors. The setting is located within school premises, offering a separate entrance and exit point for children and their parents. People who run the setting ensure a good level of security. Visitors can only access when authorised to do so and complete the visitors photo ID registration process at the main school entrance and sign via the electronic ipad visitor's system. People who run the setting carry out daily safety checks and keep purposeful risk assessments which are reviewed as and when any additional measures are identified. They also keep effective and accurate fire risk assessments, and these are reviewed at least annually. They keep building and equipment safety certificates up to date. People who run the setting manage staff to children's ratios correctly and supervise the children well. They maintain a daily register where children and staff are signed in and out of the setting accurately.

People who run the setting offer a friendly, warm, and welcoming environment. They provide good spaces for children with clean and open areas to play and learn, where they have the freedom to move around independently and safely. Leaders and staff prepare the play spaces carefully to allow children to have the best possible experiences. For example, a well-resourced home corner, dressing up, reading corner an area for floor play, and area where creativity and craft activities can be enjoyed. Outdoors, the people who run the service have access to a shared space with the school for outdoor play, a safe space which offers many stimulating areas and opportunities. For example, different wooden play equipment for children to develop their physical and problem-solving skills, sit on ride on toys as well as a stage to perform. People who run the setting offer a welcoming space for children to arrive and hang their belongings and for parents to share messages. They keep areas for waterproof clothing, a well-equipped kitchen, a confidential meeting area and an office where the setting's paperwork is stored confidentially. Displays are purposeful with a noticeboard which is full of relevant and up to date information for parents and visitors.

People who run the setting provide an excellent range of age-appropriate furniture to stimulate the children's curiosity. For example, child size tables and chairs and quality children's kitchen units. We saw a range of books, of small world play such as dinosaurs, farm animals, large construction blocks and sorting resources.

Leadership and Management

Good

People who run the setting have a good vision for the setting and share this with others. They are enthusiastic about their work. People who run the setting have comprehensive policies and procedures in place and a purposeful statement of purpose, which contribute effectively to the smooth running of the setting. They are in the main knowledgeable about their regulatory responsibilities and are organised in reviewing policies, certificates, information, and records regularly. However, although they keep staff files they were not completed fully in line with regulatory requirements for each staff members at the setting with some information being held at the sister setting where the main office base is located. Prior to the production of this report the people who run the setting provided information to confirm all staff files were available at the setting and completed fully in line with regulatory requirements to include records of regular supervision sessions. Registers of attendance are up to date and correct. People who run the setting ensure that children's records include parental contracts, permissions, responses.

People who run the setting present an annual quality of care review, showing evidence of how they respond to feedback. They have good arrangements in place for identifying strengths and areas for improvement and all staff are committed to improving the quality of provision and outcomes for children. People who run the setting distribute questionnaires electronically and listen to the opinions and views of those who use the setting. As a result, they work continuously to develop their service of care.

People who run the setting have established a team of staff who work closely and effectively. Staff said the setting is a very happy place and that they work well together as a team. Staff commented they feel valued and well supported by the management team enabling them to fulfil their roles and responsibilities effectively and confidently. People who run the setting ensure staff mandatory certificates are up to date and regular training is provided as part of their ongoing professional development. They ensure systems for appraisal and supervision encourage reflection, effectively enabling staff to set personal goals.

People who run the setting have established good partnerships that improve the quality of provision and outcomes for children. They have effective links with their sister setting, ensuring staffing is always maintained. They also have strong links with the school where they are located which supports children very well in their transitions into the setting and in their next stage of education. Parents are highly supportive of the setting and team of staff. We saw clear examples of good relationships and clear and open communication. Parents are complimentary and praise the staff saying their children really love attending.
